Circle Writing Protocol: Literacy and Liberation

- We will number off and break into even groups. You'll need paper and something to write with.

- For one minute, write as much as you can on the following prompt: What is literacy? What is the intersection of literacy and liberation?

- Now, pass your response to the person to your right. The person receiving your response will expand and grow your response, and you'll do the same for the response you receive.

- As you receive your own response back, read through your classmates' thinking and share how your thinking around the intersections of literacy and liberation grew as a result of this activity. What new thinking, understandings, and connections emerged for you?
