Circle Write: Types of Literacy

Throughout this unit we've talked about literacy in terms of both the written and spoken word and we've begun to explore concepts of music and spatial literacy. Literacy is much more than being able to read and write, it is about reading the world. In what other ways can we read the world? In other words, what other types of literacy might exist in the world?

In your group, write as much as you can in response to the question: What other types of literacy might exist in the world? Include some specific examples if you can think of any. You'll have 1 minute to write as much as you can.

After 1 minute, pass your paper to the next person. You'll have 1 minute to add to what your peer has written. Continue this until you receive your paper back.
