

The First Amendment is somewhat healthy in our digital world, because depending on the things you say, your public stance may be altered all because the thing you said was taken the wrong way or you complained about something.

The First Amendment is somewhat healthy in our digital world, but there are crucial times when you need backup on your speech/post and the media will support and uphold your claim.

The First Amendment is somewhat healthy in our digital world, so action must be taken and people should be allowed to speak their mind without needing to worry if it's gonna interfere with their job or personal life.

The First Amendment is somewhat healthy in our digital world, because the things we say can greatly impact the way we live since information can spread extremely quick and if you say something you might regret, there isn't any way to take back what you said since social media posts stay forever.

The First Amendment is somewhat healthy in our digital world, because some things still happen that is not very safe.

The First Amendment is somewhat healthy in our digital world, but the government is monitoring our texts or social media which means that some of our rights were taken away.

The First Amendment is somewhat healthy in our digital world, so we could find ideas to make the digital world healthy.

★ Claim on paper ★

• The First Amendment is somewhat healthy in our digital world, because some things on the internet is not protect.